

Up from the devastated lowlands, survivors carry their belongings, remnants salvaged from the flood. They carry their shoes and wear mud socks.

Ankle-deep in silt, a woman employe searches the remains of the United Jewelers store on Main Street in Johnstown. Little was left. What the flood didn't destroy the looters carried off.

The Great Flood of 1977

Principal photography and layout design by Don Baker
 Principal Text and story editing by Kristine Jenkins
 Copyreading and editing by Mary G. Weakland

Contributing photographers and writers: Charles R. Dillen, Thomas Gibb, Dave Hamilton, Philip B. Ray, James M. Shafer, Dave Spurgeon, Jerry Stitt and Kay Stephens.

Published by the Mirror Printing Company, 1000 Green Ave., Altoona, Pa. 16601

Additional copies are available by mail at $2 plus 12 cents tax plus 50 cents handling charge.

© Mirror Printing Co.
 August 1977